Very interesting content that we can relate to other course
As a science major, I do appreciate the explicit links this course makes with health, and how health outcomes are not only biological in cause.
Even though the start was a bit chaotic, Prof Quesnel Vallée (sorry if I butchered the name) and Prof Bunakova did an excellent job at restructuring the course :).
At first, I didn't think I would enjoy this class as much and chose it mainly because Dr. Das was known to be a great teacher. So when he got sick, I was anxious about how this class was going to go. However, it turned out to be really relevant to my major (Physical therapy) and I learned a lot of interesting concepts in class.
The content is always interesting and presented very clearly!
I look forward to attending this class and I feel as though I have learned a lot!
The course material is very relevant to me as a social work student specialising in gerontology. It gives statistical/research context to my social work classes on the subject.
Course was disrupted by Mr Das' sick leave
Although it had a bumpy start because of the unpredictable circumstances, the course has started to flow much better and the professor Bunakova has been very understanding and is doing a great job managing the course
I've learned so much about my major through this course, and this class has made me eager to take other Sociology courses here at McGill.
The class got substantially better once Prof. Bunakova took over.
Interesting course with also interesting students as in it touches on topics from sociology and nursing ergo the discussion is made more interesting with students from both departments. Just generally interesting course.
This semester started off to a rocky start as we were trying to find a lecturer. But once our new instructor, Ms. Bunakova, began to fill in. This course has been sailing smoothly. Her lectures are interesting and engaging. I have enjoyed this course.
Although Sociology isn't my chosen field of study, I have to say this class makes me wanna take more soci classes!
very interesting course and reasonable work load
The content and structure of this course were not what I expected, however, the new professor has done a great job at accommodating after a hectic beginning.
I think this course was very interesting! My only criticism would be that there are some points that are not very nuanced – such as when discussing the aging crisis, many arguments pointed towards having more children, and it wasn't very explicitly addressed how governments encouraging people to have more children could be damaging.
I find the methods of evaluation to be very nice on the workload.
Overall, everything I have learned from this course has been very beneficial for my learning and also extremely interesting!
This class is very relevant and draws on various aspects of sociology to examine the life course. This class is very engaging, and the lectures and readings are strongly connected.
Very interesting and relevant course

She is a very good professor! The breakdown in the slides is very comprehensible and her explanations are very clear. She makes the course very engaging and fun.
Wow she explains so well, she gives many examples so we can relate the content to things we know
I think Prof. Bunakova is available, helpful and has a great grasp of the material she teaches. I have confidence in her teaching and don't need to rely on external sources in order to meet the criteria of her course.
Professor Bunakova is a great instructor. She presents the material in an easy-to-digest manner and provides multiple examples to ease our understanding. She was also very considerate of the difficulties and uncertainties we faced in the beginning of the semester with our professor having to take a sick leave. Overall, I greatly enjoyed being taught by Professor Bunakova.
Amazing. Super clear and helpful. One of the most helpful and kind prof I had during my experience in McGill. Sometimes maybe just talking slightly bit louder would be good!
Even if Miss Bunakova came to teach this class 1/4 into the semester, she handled it incredibly well. I don't feel like we missed anything. She makes sure that she is clear in her explanations, gives many graphs to back her explanations and even gives day-to-day examples to which we can relate. She takes the time to answer our questions, in and out of class time. She also took time to listen to our concerns about the class situation and made sure we weren't penalized for it.

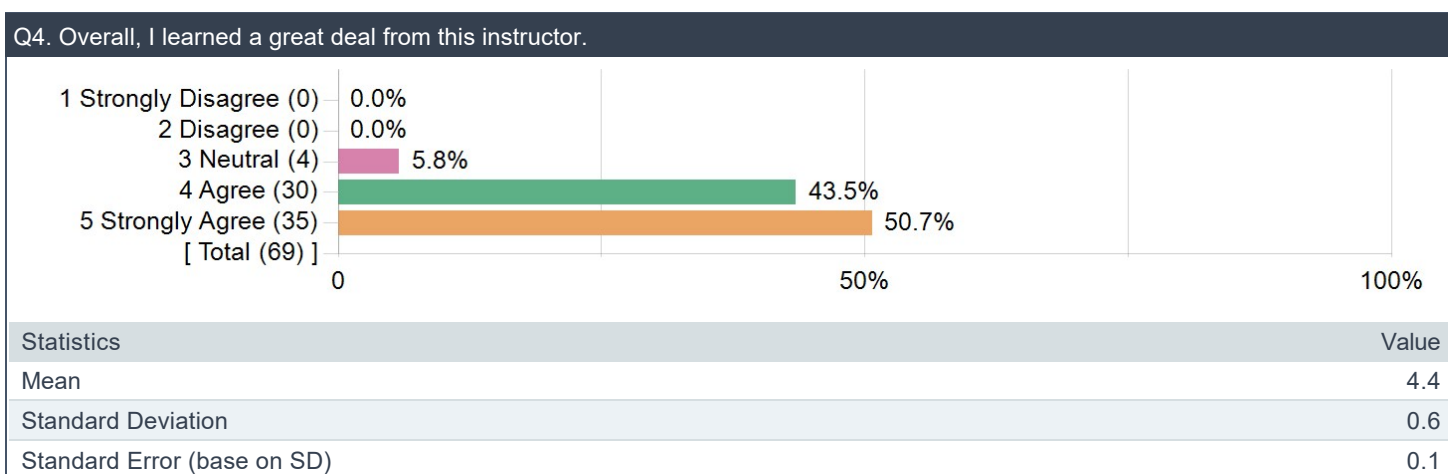

Comments
Prof. Bunakova is clear, interesting, and engaging. She is fair and always willing to answer questions and have dialogue with the students.
I can confidently say that Michaela is one of the better teachers that I have had so far during my time at McGill. It is very clear that she is knowledgeable on the topics of the course and that she is committed to making sure we get as much as possible out of the class.
I really like how Michaela explains concepts in a straight-forward, easy-to-understand manner. She also gives explanations after going over the slide, explaining the contents in a different way to ensure clarity. She is also very approachable and has gone out of her way to offer other opportunities for students to get engaged in the course material and earn participation points (mycourses discussion board, etc.)
Prof. Bunakova has been amazing at reorganizing the course and making the material and readings simple to understand. She makes classes fun and enjoyable as well as packed with material, not in an overwhelming way.
Very helpful and great lecturing style. Provided a sense of reassurance after the beginning of the course was quite hectic.
Professor Bunakova is a great teacher, she is very knowledgeable and understanding when it comes to accommodations to people's schedules and needs. As for the class notes that she provides, she is very knowledgeable and is great at transmitting the information that we learn.
She is incredibly helpful both in and outside of class. Her explanations for confusing concepts are very useful for the midterm. Also, she is very conscious of trying to give the whole class the best grade possible for this class.
She cares about the students and keeps the door open for us to see her if we need help. She was also very accommodating in the transition we had to make between her, Professor Das, and Dr. Quesnel-Vallée. She is great.
Explains the harder words that are supposedly prior knowledge, explains the concepts efficiently and well, in simpler words that can be understood for a course this level. Just generally explains in a very understandable way.
One of my favorite instructors in my time at McGill. She remains professional and knows what she's doing, but is extremely friendly and you can tell she cares about the class and its students. The classroom became very welcoming with her as a prof. For an 8:30 she really comes through for us!
Prof. Bunakova is passionate about her area of study and a good lecturer. Her slides are helpful, she makes clear connections with the readings, and cares about her students. For example, she remembers students names and is always ready and willing to help. I find that very comforting, especially in a class that has had a lot of disruptions this semester.
her slides are great and she explains things well
Miss Bunakova moves through content quite quickly, but is ALWAYS available for feedback and advice. She has provided more support than any other prof that I had this semester and understands the struggle of being a student right now. She has been insanely accommodating considering our strange circumstances and I am so grateful that she was our replacement prof this semester. I almost forgot about the expansive and in depth supplementary materials she provides for us, which are amazing! Would definitely take a class with her again.
She is clear and concise, and allows students to look over her slides, which have a great amount of detail on them. Maybe leaving notes in the comments section of the slides would also be useful for further details.
Ms Bunakova is very friendly and delivered very clear lectures with helpful slides so I enjoyed her lectures very much. I would only suggest that she slow down her pace in teaching a little as sometimes it was hard to keep up. Also, I think it would be good include more sensitive terminology in lectures (ie. Black people instead of "Blacks" / LEDCs instead of "third world")
I really enjoy going to class mainly because of the real life examples that is brought up in class which broaden my understanding of the themes that we are exploring Michaela was a great instructor for the last minute change in the course, she did a really good job of communicating the change. As for actual teaching, she was clearly passionate and made learning interesting.
I liked how organized Ms. Bunakova was. Though the class was on to a slow and concerning start, she picked up and regained control seamlessly. She is very understanding and makes our lives easier as students.
Cares a lot about the students and makes an effort to help, allow them to do well and make it interesting for them Clear explanations.
Micheala Bunakova is an understanding and compassionate teacher. I have loved all the time she has spent with us and truly appreciate the care she has for her students. It feels like all she wants is for us to succeed and learn, which is a really comforting feeling.
Super kind, funny and engaging! She really did a good job to teach the material, especially since it was her first time teaching I believe.
Professor Bunakova is an energetic and passionate teacher who is extremely knowledgeable in this subject area. Her personality shines through onto the lectures and she has ensured our understanding throughout the course with many opportunities to receive help, as she wants us to deepen our knowledge as well. She seamlessly took over in the absence of our original instructor and has clearly put in a lot of effort to learn each of our names and listen to us.

Prof Bunakova presents topics in simple, straightforward ways. The examples she uses also help in the conceptualisation of these concepts Great professor, very kind, patient and available for her students, it shows that she cares for her students – she remember all of our names! She seemed very prepared and knowledgeable despite all the class disruption we had and the limited amount of time she might have had to prepare the course material Great detailed powerpoints, it shows that she put a lot of effort into doing them, thank you!
I loved how engaging the lectures were, especially so early in the morning. The information was always presented clearly and (for the most part) at a good pace. The real-world examples were extremely useful in understanding the lecture material.

Lectures are clear and engaging
Very clear content
I found that sometimes, there was too many information given at a fast pace and I needed a couple of minutes to digest it all. However, taking into consideration that we were behind in the schedule, I understand that the lectures needed to be a bit condensed and I should have been reviewing the slides before and after to make sure to grasp as much info as I could during the lectures.
I think her PPTs are really well constructed and have a lot of information, which helps us recall the information mentioned in class. I really appreciate that the lectures are recorded too. This type of class is pretty complicated for me because I come from another major, so being able to re-listen to the lectures and have a lot of information on the slides helped me a lot.
Lectures were always very clear and related to the readings we were given.
When this course first started, I was concerned about my ability to learn in the class. Once Michaela took over the course content became much more clear and interactive which greatly enhanced my learning experience.
Lectures were effective although they were somewhat rushed! More time spent on each section would have been appreciated.
Sometimes I found Michaela went over concepts too quickly but I understand she had pressure to go fast to catch up on material as we were several weeks behind in content due to Prof Das unfortunately falling ill.
Lacks some energy/dynamic vibe to make lectures more engaging/fun (difficult to focus during 8:30am classes)
The lectures, of course, cover a lot of material, but Michaela conveys the material in a manner that is easy to understand, And if there are concepts I do not understand right away, she is very approachable about asking questions during and outside of class.
The slides were great and really helped to grasp the material.
In the first lecture, she just summarized everything from before she became our instructor very concisely and expanded on the things that were harder to understand, like certain words that are more scientific, which was great it is a sociology course and the students study sociology ergo I didn't know some of these words fully.
I found them to be effective interesting and captivating lectures
Recording the lectures were very useful.
I enjoyed the ratio of lecture–q&a style discussion, and I thought the detailed slides were helpful to look back on especially.
Lectures were a bit fast sometimes, which is understandable because we were behind schedule. However, she always reviewed major concepts and reemphasized important information.
Powerpoints are a nice asset that include many details from the lectures.
I thought the way all the lectures were taught were effective and the slides always had the perfect amount of information, not too much, but not too little.
Her lectures have been helpful to guide along the conversation and are engaging while still being content focused.
Great detailed powerpoints, although some figures were a bit hard to analyse/understand

She makes herself very available for her students! She is always there to help Always has time to answer her emails and set up zoom, available even before class starts to answer our questions. I am really happy that she gives feedback on our work
Prof. Bunakova is very available. Any time we needed to meet for projects, she would always rely promptly and answer our questions/concerns.
She was available to meet with us to discuss the grant proposal and any other issues we might have with how the course is going.
She answers questions directly after class which is very appreciated especially for small questions that can be clarified fast. She is also available by e-mail and gave availabilities for Zoom/in-person meetings. So, she gave us many options in which we could contact her.
She always answered emails promptly and made time to meet with students when necessary.
I never had an issue with finding the time to have my questions answered! Communication in class and via email was very effective Michaela has gone out of her way to be available to students, informing us through class announcements and via MyCourses of how to reach her. She is also active on MyCourses Discussion Board!
Open to meet and helpful for things that weren't even class related.
Professor Bunakova is always there at least 15 minutes before class and is available to answer many questions
I emailed her this year, and she was able to meet with me throughout the midterm. I really appreciate her taking the time out of her busy schedule to meet with me, and I also appreciate her fairness to other students.
Prof. Bunakova always made it a point to stay up to half an hour after every class to answer every question.
Available for office hours and also for small chats after the lecture.
Responded in a timely manner to emails, and was always willing to set up office hours
One of the most available instructors I've had Michaela was always willing to talk and work with students in order to help us get as much as possible out of this course. She was a very effective, engaging, and compassionate instructor.
Ms Bunakova replies to emails very quickly, which is great, and is very open to having meetings with students at an arranged time or after class.
Instructor was very quick and clear in responding to mails and giving feedback
The instructor responds rapidly by email.
I personally have never individually spoken with the professor one on one but I know individuals in the class who have and who say she is very approachable and easy to speak to.
Replies super fast to email, encourage students to come to see her for questions. Very available.
She offers many times to meet with her, even offering a calendar for us to schedule around what times work best for us. Among all of her other commitments she makes time to make sure we are each satisfied and have a thorough understanding.
She is very available for her students :)

We feel like it's an open discussion people can talk freely
Dialogue was encouraged in class
I found the content of this course to be very interesting, as it was quiet relevant to my field of study. Since I was taking this course as a complementary course to my program, it gave me some sociological insights into the healthcare experience of older adults which was very beneficial for me
Michaela always asks questions to the class ("Why do you think that is") which is also really helpful because it challenges us to consider why a certain statistical relationship may be occurring; in this way, she relates theoretical concepts to real world application.
She devotes certain slides to question and answers for students, and gives students in the class an opportunity to participate and ask questions.
We were often encouraged to think critically and questions were often asked in class.
In my prior sociology course, I've never had a class this challenging as it also dips into nursing and biology which I am not familiar with. The objectives are always clear. Students were often invited to share their ideas and it was promoted.
This class isn't that challenging considering it is broken down effectively and is based on pattens we have observed in our own lives or in media. However, it was still very intriguing.
I did not find this class that challenging, but I really enjoyed the content anyway!
The instructor was always more than welcome to hear out students' opinions Participation points push students to participate.
I agree with all statements above.
We had time to share our ideas within class and within the TA sessions on Fridays when we could talk through our personal concerns and work together through them.
She tries to make students participate by asking questions in class Some concepts and theories were challenging to understand for students who are non-sociology majors but she does a good job at explaining them and is very available for student questions

I think it is very fair to have midterm final and project. I like that we have 72h to do it it is less stressful and we can do more research to make sure we understand the concepts
Considering the course's situation at the beginning of the semester, I think we were taken care of very well. We weren't at all penalized for it and we were even given a bunch of advantages to compensate for the little chaos of the beginning of the semester. I think it was taken care of very smoothly and appropriately.
Especially given the rock start to the semester, the assessments felt fair
I am writing this before the final exam, but I found the midterm to be very fair and the expectations were clearly outlined.
I found it very fair to have 72 hours to answer two essay questions
Classes were cancelled for ~1,5 weeks following Mr Das' absence, leading to general confusion/lack of mastery surrounding the course (I chose to drop work for this class in favor of other classes as keeping up with readings/course material would prove itself overly time-consuming/counter-productive). Despite this fact, nothing was changed in the course outline/work-load concerning midterms, leading to a stressful/draining study and midterm period. On top of that, Ms Quesnel-Vallée's guest lectures added even more work for midterms, even though they cover material from another class (SOC1 309 Health and Illness) and she explicitly mentioned they were not particularly relevant to this course. This somehow made the class even more chaotic than it was before Ms Bunakova appeared, and poor management of its unstable schedule reflected negatively on my work experience/motivation.
The outline for the midterm and assignments were properly formatted, and if there was any confusion, she and Luca are both open to questions of any kind to help our understanding of the material.
Assigned texts were often a bit old. However, they were always on topic. Also, the text selection was not made by Professor Bunakova; she kept the same texts that Professor Das assigned us to stay consistent with the initial curriculum.
The final project is quite demanding, group work is not always easy.
Tests more on understanding rather than regurgitating information, and has a research proposal, which makes sense because this is a sociology course, it shows our ability to work in a group, understanding and application of information from the course.
very fair
I understand that Prof. Bunakova had very little control over the syllabus created by Prof. Das, but I found that the structure of the take home papers were a little frustrating. I thought it was a lot of work to answer two questions in such a small time frame. Especially during the final exam period, the take home window coincides with many of my other exams. Considering its a take home and I wont be able to prepare for the prompts, I don't believe this provides me with an opportunity to display my understanding of the lecture material.
workload is fair
The group proposal is worth such a high percentage of the grade I feel that it may undermine the work in the midterm slightly.
The questions on the midterm were adequate and further expand my understanding of the concepts we covered in class
There were a lot of readings.
Take home format is very convenient for students.
I think everything we have been evaluated on so far and the assignments for the future are very fair.
While this class used an open book format, the research and reading component kept these exams challenging and encouraged us to input our own beliefs, ideas, and knowledge into the questions while interacting with the course materials. Definitely was a challenge having multiple instructors teaching this course, but overall, I think this was a fair way to gauge our understanding of the material (while allowing us some creative freedom with the exam questions).
Professor Bunakova was very accommodating for the midterm , offering help and advice for the grant proposal, etc.
I like how the assignments (midterm/final exam) are designed I am very happy that Prof. Bunakova allows us to do a first draft submission on November 25th for us to improve on her feedback, very kind of her!

I think the group project is very challenging because we were told not to focus on research methods stats during readings but then we need to make a grant proposal stating the methods we will use which is stressful and confusing because we don't really know what to look fo
See above comment for thoughts about the midterm. The research proposal is also a very interesting project. I like that the guidelines for a topic choice were very open ended so we really got to choose something that was of interest to us
A wider variety of evaluation methods would have been preferable. We really only had 3 big components that we were evaluated on.
I feel like the TA evaluated the midterm less on the rubric and more via comparison between/across tests (i.e., what checked off all the marks on the rubric did not earn an A because a handful of students went above and beyond, changing the goal post). Some clarity would have also been appreciated re: the use of readings (it was mentioned in class if we want to use them, but some students lost points on the midterm because they did not use any of the readings). Otherwise, it was really appreciated that the rubric was released, and that the prof and TA were willing to go over the test, and share stellar responses.
Highly generous grading was used to compensate for the overall lack of mastery in this course, which leads to a lack of merit in the results (I personally do not believe I deserve an 82% grade for my midterm, and the true average is likely much lower than 81%). Course material was covered quantitatively rather than qualitatively (which was not the initial promise), giving students a surface-level/shallow understanding of it which then required this grading behavior. I generally feel like I have not learned much nor put much effort into this class, and was somehow rewarded for it. I think this problem could have been bypassed if some of the course material was deleted from the syllabus to allow for deeper analysis of the remaining readings along with a modified midterm perhaps including less questions to bring a more fair/merit-based evaluation method.
I was not too pleased with the way the midterm was graded, especially because of the circumstances and the professor saying they would be lenient with the grading. Other than that I think the grade distribution of the class was appropriate.
I love the fact that we don't have to cram any informations and that the exams are take home. It makes for the application of knowledge way better because it gives us time to reflect on the material that we learn
There were appropriate rubrics for the assignment evaluations, and we were able to look at it before and during completing the work.
research paper and take home tests (little essays on topics from the class) shows our understanding i agree
A take home midterm over the weekend is not appropriate. When classes have in person assessments, time is taken out of the lecture time to complete evaluation. If there is going to be a take home exam (which when there are in person classes is unnecessary) it should be during the week.
Even though the group proposal is stressful, I appreciate that it is a very useful assignment to have done and will prepare me for future proposals well.
This was a challenging semester with multiple instructors, but the method of administering the exams was appropriate given the confusion that was caused by having 3 very different teach styles within class.
The group assignment was worth a lot for a team project, and also had little to do functionally with the rest of the course. Although a grant proposal is a useful skill, it was very unrelated to the other evaluation methods, especially since we do not talk about research methods in this class.

lectures and what was asked from us was very clear!
Great clear slides
I appreciated that the slides were posted before the class!
Love that lectures/ppt are organised around the relevant readings, ensuring seamless integration between what we read and what we learn in class. In many of my other classes, readings are treated as a bonus and many students don't feel compelled to read them as a result.
these have been the best slides i have even had in a sociology class.
The lectures were easy to follow and the readings that are required are also covered in lectures to increase students' understanding.
Uploaded presentations in order and readings in order with dates of when it is due.
The readings were a bit long but considering we didn't have to know everything about them, it was fine
I think lecture recordings were not that great, and even though I enjoy detailed slides there are some that were a little too loaded with text. But even so, they were very helpful in contributing to my understanding of the lectures and definitely very helpful to look back on!
I liked how the instructor would go over the themes in the readings
Lectures were organized.
The PowerPoints were very engaging, and used a mixture of visuals, charts, and words for every learning style.
Thank you for posting the slides and having lecture recordings available. It helps a lot.

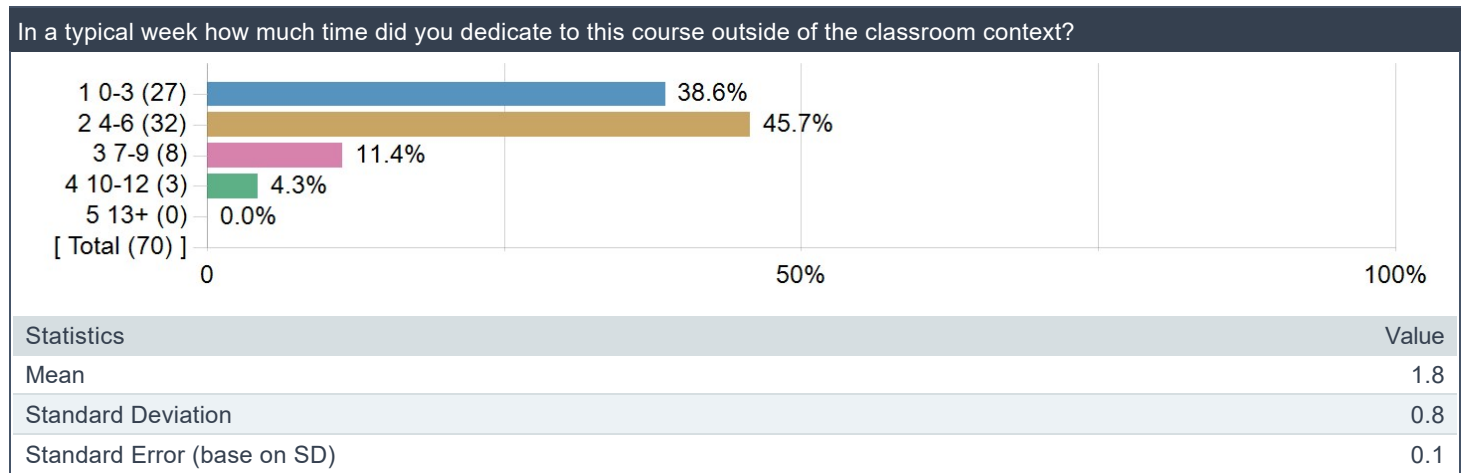

Please provide written comments with respect to the instructor and the course (including course materials, readings etc.).

This instructor was amazing! She made the course a lot funnier! She came in a couple weeks later and provided us with a summary so we would feel secure in our understanding! Overall amazing!
I feel like there are too many readings
I feel like since Miss Bunakova came, I understand the material a lot better and I am able to discuss it. I think she's going a great job and was the right pick to replace Dr. Das!
Great slides!
Michaela has done a great job teaching this course! Her lectures are very clear and cover the material in a way that makes it easy to understand. The support of the content that comes from the readings also helps with comprehension of the course content.
The instructor was very familiar with the material and presented it in an understandable manner. I wish the course had been a little less rushed but we were under difficult circumstances this semester so I understand. The readings were insightful and I appreciated how we went over them in class.
easy to understand powerpoint presentations, no overloading of extra material (which may seem helpful but if there's too much to sort through, students won't!)
the instructor is very knowledgeable. She is a little fast paced during lectures but I understand this is because we had a lot of material to catch up on.
Despite the "crisis" this class is going through, Ms Bunakova remains optimistic and kind in the way she delivers lectures and visibly tries her best to help students in any way she can, even though she wasn't supposed to be an instructor for this course. Readings are interesting, but easily get complicated (i.e numerous technical terms employed, complex figures/statistics to interpret yourself)
The original instructor was a dud .Michaela and Luka are excellent. The slides are comprehensive and easy to revise from. She will always address you individually if needed
It is a fair amount of time compared to the class time. It is hard for me to make it to class 3 times a week because I commute 2h away so I have to wake up at 6am to come, so if there was a way to have 2 classes a week instead of 3 it would make it much easier for me
Michaela was amazing considering having to jump into the course in the middle of the semester. She continues to engage with her students during lectures and covers the readings on the syllabus in the lectures to help us better understand the material.
The course readings were numerous, perhaps a bit too much, in my opinion. However, they were on topic. The material was interesting. However, I think that it is a shame that we had to cover some issues rapidly to make it on time. However, I do not blame anyone for this, as this was caused by the unplanned change in professors and the canceled classes.
Michaela Bunakova has been incredibly kind and helpful throughout the semester. She truly made a class that had a bumpy start enjoyable, and she was able to right the ship very well.
Instructor is great, as her lectures are followable and also aids further understanding on the readings.
I really liked the way the course was set up. Sometimes I had to hurry to make sure I got everything down but I don;t have any criticism of the course material or instructor the course was a bit chaotic in the beginning as the teacher switched but now it is running smoothly
I think Ms Bunakova did a wonderful job teaching this course, I enjoyed how her lectures summarized the readings effectively, as readings were otherwise very dense and difficult to process.
I enjoy how the prof unfolds the topics especially by giving day-to-day evidence that makes the themes more contemporary and universal. The way the midterm questions were phrased made it very easy to follow along making sure to answer each part of the question. The materials provided by the instructor for the grand research proposal were also very useful in helping my group frame our work.
The readings assigned were interesting and clear. The methods of evaluation were convenient.
Professor Bunakova provided the necessary materials in order to have a mix of in-depth reading materials with an in-class dissection of the materials. There were very clear expectations, and the material was presented in a way that ensured that various viewpoints were accounted for. I appreciated the time spent to make sure we understood each assignment, even giving us examples of how to best present our final project (grant proposal). This is an incredibly useful skill to learn, especially for those of us that may continue to take sociology courses and pursue a career in the field.
Prof. Bunakova is an excellent professor. It's hard to imagine that it's only her first year teaching, she's doing a really great job as an educator and I would take her class again if I had the chance!

Very reasonable work
Group project takes a lot of time, but that's normal
This course was very manageable and it was easy to feel confident in my understanding of the concepts through just the live lectures alone! Of course, more time was put into this course during the research paper and exams.
I'm a slow reader so it takes me a long time to read! Now that we are working on our final paper, my weekly work on this class is increasing (~5 hours)
I spent quite some time going over concepts that I am having difficulty understanding, and completing the required reading to supplement what will be covered in class the following day.
Just for the readings but with longer readings, I spend more time in on the course outside of the class.
With the group project, it became more i found that the professor did a good job of reviewing the readings and therefore I only did the readings after class if I felt I needed more and if not then than during the exam period.
There were alot of readings, meetings with group members.
I found that between the absence of instructors and the readings I was not incredibly stressed about workload for this class. We had to account for the many weeks that we were not having class regularly due to the health issues of Professor Das, but overall this was still a course that the readings took a significant time to read in full.
Prof. Bunakova does an excellent job at explaining the readings and the course concepts which really helps students follow in class

The Teaching Assistant was effective in fulfilling their role.
