Interesting class that makes you think critically about different mechanisms of the aging process.
This course provided valuable insight on life course and aging trends. As a psychology student, it was interesting to learn about how sociological trends might affect the lifespan, and it got me thinking about their psychological impacts.
Wonderful prof, really interesting material, midterms and project are fair.
Prof cares about the content, engaging with students, and making sure everyone understands what she's teaching.
The Sociology of Aging and the Life Course was a uniquely enriching course that I am grateful to have taken. It offered me a more profound understanding of the aging process and illuminated the ways in which we are socialized throughout our lives.
Very interesting overall! The content is relevant, especially to our generation and what we are experiencing as young adults transitioning into adulthood.
Course materials are interesting, the professor is amazing!
Very interesting content, and the readings are challenging but very informative and well-explained. I also enjoy the engagement with the class.
Very engaging content, attentive professor, and overall great course.
one of my favourite sociology courses I've ever taken; well-organized with reasonable workload
The class was very informative, engaging, and flexible in nature as it provided an opportunity to discuss students' thoughts which made it richer. It also discussed about relevant topics of today's world that made me resonate with the material.
Wished it was longer !!! Professor is super involved and really sweet !
I have really enjoyed the content in this class and Professor Bunakova does an excellent job at explaining the material in an easy-to-understand manner.
I really enjoyed the whole material that we were taught. Personally, the lectures on social networks were a bit harder overwhelming with too much information coming at once in such a short time which led to a bit of confusion for me and my friend (for example the non-spousal dyads). However, the rest of the material was really well taught. The professor also created a very friendly environment where everyone felt like they can participate, I haven't spoken in the majority of my classes and I found myself engaging with the class as to often times. Really appreciated that.
Very interesting and engaging. I like that everything we discuss is from academic papers that we have access to, allowing us to learn more. The essays for midterms and finals helps us further cement concepts.
Professor Bunakova is very fair and interesting to listen to, and makes the information very interesting to listen to.
offers a variety of perspectives on aging and the life course, covering a lot of material without feeling too fast-paced; variety of assessment methods (group project, midterm, final, participation) made the course feel manageable – there were many opportunities to do well in this course; open communication/feedback between the instructor and the students was helpful and engaging
I really enjoy the organization of this course as well as the content discussed. It is a very fun class!
Very intrsting !
Professor Bunakova was very engaging as most classes had many discussion opportunities
Interesting and palitable content
The material in itself (like the readings) is not the most interesting however Professor Bunakova makes this an excellent course. Her approach to teaching and incorporating the material into relatable applications is what keeps everyone engaged. She has a very fun and interactive teaching style and finds a way to make the material relatable and applicable to us.
I would strongly recommend selecting this course, even just as an elective. I think that the contents of this course are overlooked in everyday life and are very important to be aware of and knowledgeable about. It's one of very few courses that I find has everyday use in our day-to-day lives and makes us aware of things that we don't get taught in a class, and typically learn by experience.

The professor lectures in a way that is engaging. She allows student's to reflect and share their thoughts during class which makes it an interactive environment.
She is very kind, takes the time to learn her students' names/faces, and makes the class really interesting. Very well prepared and ensures lectures are on time and delivered well.
she is so understanding and caring. she really understands the problems her students are facing. I feel very comfortable in her class. GREAT PROFFF!!!
interactive classes that provided a comfortable environment for discussion
Michaela Bunakova is extremely knowledgeable about this course and it showed through in her lectures. The course was well organized and thoroughly planned. I can tell that great care was taken to ensure that students were taught, not just forced to memorize and regurgitate the information. The instructor was also very friendly and approachable, and I always felt very comfortable to ask her questions if I had any.
Very engaging, class discussions were very interesting, class material was presented in an interesting way that made me want to learn more.

Prof Bunakova creates a great learning environment and is very approachable.
Very personable and approachable as a professor and very clear on what is important and what to retain from lectures and readings. Knowledgeable and insightful in this area and great at instigating discussion among the class.
She helps me a lot. She is so patient to solve problems and she is excellent!
I enjoyed Professor Bunakova's teaching and readings. I liked that she was straight to the point and concise, which made content easier to absorb.
The professor truly wants to help her students and engages in class discussion
I love how she engages with students, she makes sure that we understand and ask questions when we are unsure. Very encouraging person! The flow of the information is a little fast for me, as it is still my first semester at McGill.
The professor was incredibly accommodating and understanding of students situations, she issued extensions which helped in aiding the quality of student work. Professor Bunakova was incredibly clear with what she expected from students and set them up for success in her course.
Professor Bunakova creates a welcoming environment for all students in her class. Her content is very interesting and her lectures are informative.
I liked the slide layouts and class discussion built into lecture.
Prof. Bunakova is one of the kindest professors I have had at McGill. She always makes the time to speak with students and welcomes them. You can tell that she wants you to succeed.
empathetic, passionate, available and well-versed in the topic
She is engaging, open to students' opinions, and the slides were very well structured and engaging!
She made herself available for her students, prepared students very well for the exams, and it shows that she wants students to succeed. I appreciated the feedback for the proposal before the actual deadline so as to help students max their grades. I liked that we unpacked the readings during class.
Knows a lot and very understanding!
Prof Bunakova does a great job engaging the class and finding ways to help us understand the material better. She is great at providing feedback on ways we can improve (as shown by the revise and resubmit deadline for our grant proposal project). It is also really nice to have a prof who truly cares that her students succeed.
The material taught was really well explained and the research we looked at was interesting. I enjoyed the teaching style as well and felt really supported throughout the semester. Thank you Ms. B
Engaging and funny. Reasonable and understanding. Allowing participation marks from all sources (discussion posts or talking in class) makes it more accessible to students who are uncomfortable speaking their thoughts in front of a large group.
Professor Bunakova is very kind, fair and informative to listen to.
lectures are engaging and punctuated with discussion sections, though at times the lectures went quickly (it was hard to keep up and also have time to think about/engage with the material) and the discussion questions sometimes went on for long periods; Professor Bunakova was very open to feedback and had good communication, which empowered me as a student; it is evident that Professor Bunakova cares for her students' well-being and wants them to do well Professor Bunakova explains concepts very well and I love the examples she provides!
She really takes the time to explain the concepts, she is very patient, she interacts with her students a lot, which makes the classe more intresting. She makes the content relatable to our daily lives, which helps me to understand the concepts better and makes it more intresting. She really takes the time to get to know her students which is great !
She is very approachable and friendly. She takes her time to ensure everybody understands the material and is willing to break it down.
She was very helpful when needed and explained theories using real-life examples
Appreciated how engaging the Prof was and touched on some really interesting concepts
Professor Bunakova is one of my favourite teachers I have had at McGill. She is kind, approcheable, knowledgeable and a great teacher. She makes the material interesting and engaging, and sets her students up for success in examinations and assessments. You can tell she truly cares about her students and their success. If you follow her instructions, attend class, and do the work you can easily get an A. She is very knowledgeable in her field and always has something interesting to add or a new way to apply the material.
Prof. Bunakova has a very radiant energy and attitude, she is always in high spirits, and eager to be in the classroom ready to teach. To me, that is the first step to engaging your students and makes a big difference in a lecture. She is extremely well-versed, and passionate about the content that she teaches and makes the process fun, interactive, and really immerses herself in the experience with the students, striving to allow everyone to do as best as they possibly can. She answers questions very thoroughly, which I find, surprisingly, doesn't happen often with other Professors as there is always a sense of ambiguity left lingering. But, Prof.

Bunakova is always willing to address questions in their entirety to ensure that you receive the best understanding of a concept that she can provide.
10/10 Professor and would 100% recommend this course to somebody else, or joining any other class that she may be teaching.

Lectures followed the readings (which were not too hard to digest or difficult to keep up with) and were also very fun to engage with since they involved a lot of open ended discussions in class.
Professor Bunakova delivered lectures and conferences that were not only effectively taught but also captivating and descriptive.
I liked the slides that she used and she presented information in a clear way.
Lectures were clear and well-structured, made sure all material on exams was covered and answered questions/clarified topics that were a little more difficult to understand.
Lectures were delivered concisely and clearly.
I thought the class was very interesting and the lectures gave a lot more information than in the slides themselves, more examples to the material making my understanding richer.
The professor created an environment where informal discussions could occur, which really helped in my understanding of class content.
Lectures were clear and concise. Very informative and easy to follow. Engaging content lectures were engaging with perfect balance between lecture and student participation Course material was very well presented and explained.
Sometimes goes a bit quickly because of the lack of class time.
Learned a lot, helped break down complex concepts into digestible sections
I feel that 2x lectures a week of 1h30 might be more worth it than the system now Even though I wasn't a huge fan of the content I found the way Professor Bunakova taught the information was interesting.
at times, lectures were a bit too fast-paced (lots of text on the slides to read and take notes on) Professor Bunakova was engaging and asked for class participation during lectures when appropriate. In addition, for those that didn't want to speak in class, the option of the discussion boards was open so that was really nice.
interacting in her lecture helps me learn better, the prof explain the concepts well .
Her methods encourage people to come to class! However, given the unforeseen circumstances of COVID, including infection and mental health struggles, removing lecture recordings may disadvantage those who are already struggling.
Lectures were concise, and informative
In sociology courses, sometimes it is difficult to understand how large or small an impact is, for example, because statistics or numbers are incomprehensible without visual representations. To aid this, she typically uses a lot of graphs and charts that were personally very helpful to me for many different subjects as opposed to just lecturing without really explaining outcomes or effects in a number of different ways, to cater to different learning methods. Prof. Bunakova's lectures are very effective, as she stops frequently for open discussion with the class which helps to additionally clarify any confusion and allows you to think about questions that you hadn't thought about prior, in regards to each topic we learn about during a lecture. Class discussion and hearing thoughts from your peers are very valuable in classes like these where many different perspectives are welcome and insightful. Prof. Bunakova is a very good speaker, and includes interesting facts, stories, and/or news articles that have kept me captivated and intrigued throughout the semester.

thank you for all your support! I hope to learn more form you !
Answered all questions I had, easy to communicate with
She was always available to chat after class and can easily schedule office hours if needed.
Prof. Bunakova took considerable time to engage with every student groups final projects and offered highly valuable feedback
The professor consistently made time for students, and responded to emails very quickly.
Professor Bunakova was always readily available and provided thoughtful and helpful answers to any questions.
She always took the time to speak with students after class and answer all of their questions thoughtfully.
my group met with the professor almost weekly. she made herself available and always responded to emails efficiently
Yes! Multiple opportunities to meet her have been made available.
I request a longer period for this class to the sociology department! The teacher deserves it !
Although I think interaction is important, I think sometimes participation took away from the short class time we had. The fact that participation is that highly graded stressed me out a bit. I also feel it sometimes forced people to intervene with already mentioned points,etc,
The professor always made it clear that she could make time for us for extra help.
available by email, conferences, after class
She responded quickly to emails and was very helpful in responses.
office hours easy to navigate and participate in (appreciate the virtual and in-person options), instructor was approachable before and after class, instructor got to know students and their work (group projects)
Professor Bunakova is available to discuss questions after class, as well as reachable by email. I didn't have any issues with contacting her.
She always took the time to inract with her students
Her office hours were very helpful and available when I needed it. She made sure to answer all my questions, plus adding some additional support that i found very helpful
Prof was always available for interactions and went out of her way to ensure that everyone had opportunities for guidance
She makes herself extremely available for students, even for topics outside of the class material specifically. We need more McGill teachers like her who truly care about their students success, inside and outside of the classroom.
Prof. Bunakova has been one of the more attentive and involved professors that I've had during my time at McGill. She makes herself readily available before and after classes for questions or discussion for as long as she is able too. She has a high response time when it comes to answering student emails and offers her time, on her days off if needed for student clarification or more Q&A time. If she was ever needed at a conference, she was always willing to attend as well. Flexibility is very important to me, because just as students have very busy lives, professors do too, and her willingness and ability to openly communicate and move her schedule to accommodate to the needs of the students in the course demonstrated passion and dedication towards the content that she was teaching and the way that it was translated to her class.

I enjoyed that the instructor encouraged participation in her classes. While people were sometimes hesitant, the discussion-style lectures allowed for reflection on the students' part and allowed us to get a better understanding of the material.
Class discussions encouraged participation and the topics were always interesting to talk about.
The prof always had consistent class discussion.
This class was definitely intellectually challenging as it was my first sociology class at McGill. However, Ms. Bunakova made me a lot more interested in sociology and how it interacts in many domains to influence and impact society. I enjoyed the encouragement of class discussion as well as the discussion board as it really helped me reflect on the course material and better understand some concepts.
Professor always encouraged class discussion
The professor consistently asks questions and expects at least 1 or 2 people to engage with her.
This course deals with a very interesting topic and brings up conversation that we have all thought about but have never delved deep into. Students were often asked to share their ideas and thus this brought up discussion for the lecture to touch on.
There was opportunity for class discussion at each lecture and during the conferences each week in the discussion board. There was a plethora of opportunities.
class discussion was promoted but not forced; we could voice our opinions live or contribute on discussion boards after class if we were more comfortable with that Class participation was always encouraged.
Already said but I really enjoyed the class environment.
To boost conference participation perhaps assign extra credit for participating in a few of them like 3, 4.
lots of opportunities to discuss our thoughts
There was a lot of open discussion in class which gave us opportunities to discuss our ideas.
through class discussion, conferences, discussion board, office hours, availability before and after class – this was very helpful
The prof asked us our opinions on a lot of topics. In every lectures, we were able to interact with her and have very enriching conversations.
Participation was encouraged, and the content was available to extend as far as the student would like to go
Very interactive and fun classroom environment. Everyone can contribute and her class discussions spark valuable insight and educational conversations that are thought provoking.
– several open classroom discussions during class time & in conferences – this course was intellectually challenging in and of the fact that there was a lot of content to understand all at once, but once you mastered main concepts, you are able to draw links between different things and realize that a lot of the things learnt are very intertwined; this made the learning process very seamless – i also think it is important to note that the order of the syllabus, for me personally, was very effective in the order that certain topics had been introduced

Expectations were clearly laid out and easy to understand. Examples and explicit directions were given to help us prepare for the midterm/project which fairly assessed out knowledge.
I think the evaluations were appropriate and clearly incorporated course material as well as allowing us to provide more insight into material. I did find that many of the readings were challenging, however, I appreciate that all the important aspects were reviewed in class to ensure that the relevant material was covered.
The group project is interesting, but I would prefer a personal one instead.
My only negative feedback is that I wish there were specifics on my midterm as to where I lost points rather than a general rubric, but I understand the TA has a lot to grade.
Assignments were clear and aided in course learning and application of topics.
Grant proposal is great because it actually relates to what a lot of us will be doing after graduation. Often profs do not assign practical assignments like this.
the grade weight distribution between assignments, exams and participation was extremely fair
If students engaged with the class material, they could succeed! Really fair grading!
I found the take-home-style exams to be quite appropriate for the course. However, grading on the midterm in particular was a bit harsher than I would have expected.
I wish the grant proposal was in smaller groups (e.g., 2) as this allows for every student to learn more about the grant proposal format and writing.
I found the midterm exam to be appropriate for the class.
midterm: questions felt as though they were too easy for the course material (did not engage me to interact deeply with the course readings and lecture material), though grading was harsher than expected group project: objectives were slightly unclear (expectations presented in lecture slides, rather than a separate handout, which would have been preferable), but soon realized this was because the proposal was largely open to interpretation and creativity; based on initial examples and objectives presented, the project seemed very difficult, but through more discussion throughout the semester, it was made clear that the expectations were lower than I had originally perceived Assignments were appropriate for the course, but I felt like they were graded harshly. It wasn't said that to get an A, it was needed to take some liberties in the way we respond to the questions. Like I didn't know how much it was required to make this assignment "my own", like I didn't know I was allowed to answer the questions in an original way. That wasn't said by the prof enough before the midterm.
Midterm examination could have been graded using more rigid structure, and reduction in subjectiveness in the grading (although this exists as an issue with grading papers in general)
– the grading for our assignments up to this point has been very fair – both the professor and our TA provided thorough feedback for any assignments or drafts of assignments that we have gotten back; very helpful and less generic feedback – the only negative comment I would make is that our course group assignment details were very vague and left to us to fill in some blanks, a more specific outline and / or rubric would have been a little bit more insightful than the initial instructions, but nonetheless, very manageable

The evaluation methods used in this course were appropriate.

I greatly enjoyed the evaluation methods. I find that the take-home essay tests allowed us to be adequately tested on our comprehension of the course material, as opposed to our memorization skills as some multiple choice tests do.
The grading rubric is quite harsh, half-points should be allowed to be given out on certain questions. I found the strictness of the rubric to be very unforgiving, even when the paper was quoted as being "very well written".
Having us write essays was a great way to engage and reflect with the material. The grant proposal is also a unique idea which was great to get us thinking about the different aspects of the life course and ageing.
Well, the evaluation and rubrics are excellent, it includes everything to review our thoughts. But i think the evalutaion is too broder, i mean the graing range. The grades between excellent and good is ambiguous. You will lose one point which may be 4–5% of your final assignment grading.
The Grant proposal allowed me to interact with more people this year, and by sharing our knowledge and putting an effort altogether creates a sense of solidarity. The formats of the exam were made to make sure we grasped the material (texts)
Assignments are all worth good amounts and offer application of the course knowledge.
The rubric for the midterm was a bit unforgiving but Prof. Bunakova took these concerns as expressed by students and has said that she will change it for the final which is very admirable.
midterm was marked a little harsher than anticipated and I presume the final will be harsher but overall the questions were fair Different components of grading were very appropriate.
Fair assessments
I think the midterm and grant proposal that we had to do was a fair way to measure our learning.
felt as though midterm was graded a little harshly; enjoyed having participation include the choice to speak in class or post on the discussion boards – this was an inclusive choice
I enjoyed the way the midterm was conducted! It was nice to be able to choose what topics we wanted to write about for the midterm; this gave us a chance to really expand upon our knowledge while still letting us show what we knew best.
The group project was really hard, but pretty intresting.
More opportunities to gain points outside of relying on subjective paper grading would be nice.
– very fair grading and open to regrading and discussing marks and providing helpful and extensive feedback

Lecture slides were always well done and contained all the material needed to cover the readings as well as relevant theories and sociological ideas.
I appreciated that the professor uploaded lecture content prior to class and recorded when possible.
I really appreciated the outline with the struncture of class by dividing the work week by week.
Readings were easily accessible and added understanding to topics touched on in class. They allowed for topics to be more fleshed out and make more sense.
it would be nice to have the readings hyperlinked on MyCourses as they were only accessible by downloading the syllabus and clicking on the link. oftentimes, my computer blocked the readings which made it more challenging to keep up With recordings, it was very good. I used them after class to refresh my memory when I made my notes more comprehensive.
We had lecture recording constantly available to us if we missed a class and presentations were always posted.
materials were very organized – appreciated this!
Very well organized.
Very well organized and accessible – powerpoint presentations were organized and minimal – readings were very helpful and specific; they were a strong reflection of the weekly topics and very helpful in further understanding

Professor Bunakova's class significantly broadened my understanding of the life course and the aging process. The lectures, conferences, and readings were exceptionally insightful.
I really enjoyed how clear the slides are. I will say sometimes because of how much discussion we have as a class we didn't always cover much material per class, but I did enjoy having discussions.
Overall, Ms. Bunakova was a great instructor who appears to be passionate about her field! Enjoyed the lectures and the content covered in them as well as the class and online discussion forums.
Incredible course, classes were effective in addressing course readings and explaining key ideas related to course content and the broader aims of the class. Assignments were well structured, challenging, and conducive to academic growth. The teacher was always available for questions and provided helpful and concise comments.
Professor Bunakova is very knowledgeable and attentive to students' sharing. Especially love the life course research framework and stratification of health during aging we've learned in class, as well as the unveiling of the unfavorable myth around aging.
Overall this course provided a great array of materials to learn. Readings, lectures, and assignments all tied together to create an environment of learning that was extremely engaging for students.
genuinely fantastic prof, made my semester so much better
The course material was very interesting as well as the readings and projects.
Prof Bunkova presents a lot of interesting topics in this class and I found the readings quite fascinating. However, I did feel that a lot of the topics we discussed were fairly redundant.
The readings were interesting and informative, however, the bulk of them are at least a decade and a half old, sometimes more. More recent data is more applicable and accurate.
Cover assigned readings more during lectures
I found the readings to be quite repetitive but Professor Bunakova made the content interesting which made me like it a lot. Her slideshows were very detailed and informative which I really appreciated when studying and doing the midterm.
The powerpoints were really nice to look at and very organized. I also really appreciated the fact that the lectures were recorded! This made it a lot easier to study and review. In addition, the readings were relevant and I like that they were expanded upon during class.
Instructor did a good job selecting material.
I thought this was a great course and I really enjoyed the ability to always share my thoughts both in class and on discussion posts.
Readings are a bit difficult to digest and dense. Lectures are clear, engaging, and informative.

I'd typically skim the readings since we'd go into a lot of detail in class.
Other than when there was a midterm or assignment, it was mostly just readings.
I had the habit of reading 1–2 readings for the week in the weekend and continue the work throughout the week. The midterm exam did take me 8–9 hours to do, as I am more used to having more time to re–read my work and make sure I have all the information correct.
Course load was not overwhelming, work that was assigned added to what was learned in lecture group project heavy but if you have a good group and like your topic, doing work for this class is genuinely engaging and fun
For most of the semester, I spent only a few hours each week studying the material of the class, however, during the grant proposal significantly more time was spent on the course outside the classroom
During the midterm and coming up to it I spent around 6, 7 ish hours total.
There were a lot of readings to do so I dedicated a significant amount of time to learning and understanding the content.
several readings were sometimes grouped at once for one due date, which was difficult to complete, but other than that the course load was very manageable
The readings are what took the most time!
The readings were too heavy, it was very hard to keep up.
reasonable amount of time but not overwhelming
– this course is not intensive in workload, so as long as you stay on top of your readings (which are imperative to assessments) weekly, which was very helpful
